The new 1953 Dodge Regent 4-door sedan, reported as being new in seventy-five states, is a lower, wider-looking car without in any way sacrificing road clearance, head room or leg room. The low sweeping line of the front fender carries straight through to the rear, accentuated by the tasteful use of chrome speed lines. The new,

modern curved, one-piece windshield and wide, wrap-around rear window, combine with knee-level seating to give driver and passengers excellent vision in all directions. ### A Sensible Change In School Division Meetings

During the first week in December Annual Meetings of School Divisions will be held throughout the Province. In previous years a separate meeting has been called for each sub-division. This year, for the first time, sub-divisions are being grouped in geographic sections and as many as six sub-divisions will hold their meetings in the same hall at the same time.

For instance, in Holden one annual meeting will be called for all six sub-divisions in the School Division. The Sturgeon School Division has reduced the number of meetings from six last year to two this year.

In the days of the little red school house, travel facilities were limited and so was the accommodation for meetings. Today, citizens interested in the important business of their children's education, can drive in a matter of minutes from one end of the School Division to another. When they get to the meeting place they can convene their general assembly meetings and individual sub-division nominations in auditoriums and separate rooms of the same modern school building.

We congratulate the new Minister of Education, A. A. Aalberg, on putting into effect this new system of calling School Division meetings. It will go a long way towards helping all ratepayers get a better understanding of the problems, needs and accomplishments of their schools.

A further suggestion we'd like to make: Why not arrange for a ladies' church or institute group to serve tea and cake during or at the conclusion of the meetings? There is no reason why a spirit of friendly social conviviality shouldn't be fostered once a year in the interests of good relations between the school authorities and the parents of the children.

A Month For Meteors

This is the month for the shooting stars, which in ancient times, were thought to represent all sorts of signs and indications. Science has determined that these streaks of light in the sky are the result of solid particles of matter from outer space. These particles travel through space at tremendous speeds but do not "light up" because of the lack of air resistance encountered in these space voids.

However, when these particles crash into our atmosphere, the rim of gas which surrounds the earth—a high degree of friction is generated and the matter is heated to extreme temperatures. The meteors actually burn the air they encounter and thus the red-hot matter accounts for the fiery streaks seen in the sky.

In case you are interested, the two principal meteor showers this month were the Taurid meteors and Leonid meteors, which reached their maximum numbers early in the month. The names are derived from the fact that they seem to diverge from the constellations of Taurus the Bull and Leo the Lion.

In addition to these meteors, there are many others during the month which can be observed in any section of the country every clear night.

WATCHFUL WAITING! Members of the Gideons in Ingersoll, Ont., placed a Bible in the CNR waiting room. It vanished. They placed a second. It vanished too. They have a third available but in the meantime have put up the following note: "Whoever stole our Bibles please return. There are others who may want to learn that 'thou shalt not steal.'" —The Toronto Star.

How to Loaf for a Living

By T. W. PUE

Living without having to work is a dream that has excited humans throughout the ages. I always have maintained that I prefer the newspaper business to a living, yet will gladly exchange any day this desk for a boat and this typewriter for a rod and reel.

As a boy I used to spend a great deal of time on the farm, and can say I did my share of chores around the milk house, chicken house and barns. Seems, though, that I was born 25 years too soon because, according to a pamphlet put out by the Canadian Bank of Commerce, a lot of this work was and is unnecessary and may actually be harmful—to the cows—of all people!

T. W. PUE

BARN WITHOUT STALLS

The newest idea in barns is not to have partitions or stalls in the cowshed. You don't build an expensive hay loft. You don't have to keep your cows locked by their necks and heads in stanchions. You don't carry the feed and water to the cows. You don't walk over to the cow to milk her. Work is eliminated from winter care of cows. Instead you let your milk cows roam the interior of the barn at will. When you give them feed you simply drop a bale or two of hay or other feed inside the door and let Bossie come and get it. Water is provided in one end of the barn in a trough just like you provide in summer in the barnyard.

The Bank of Commerce says that cows lead happier, more contented lives when they are not regimented into stalls and stanchions. Besides, what of yourself? You can spend the time loafing except at milking time. Then, you simply have the milk cows walk into the milking shed attached to the barn, and one by one they walk up to the automatic milking machine, patiently wait until the machine does its job, and walk back to the main portion of the barn. No longer do you have to carry the machine to the cows, they come to where the machine is.

SEMI-ANNUAL FERTILIZER DAYS

Not more than twice a year you clamber aboard the tractor with the automatic loader and "excavate" the production of manure from the barn. No more daily "barn cleanings" for you!

Here's what the Michigan report says: "To handle dairy cattle in a pen-type barn requires that one provide six separate and distinct areas. These are: (1) a milk house, (2) a milking parlor, (3) a lounging area, (4) a feeding area, (5) an area for freeing cows and young calves, and (6) an area for young stock. The last two of these may be in a building separate from the dairy herd."

"The pen-type barn should be provided with open exposure to the south or east and the doors should be kept open at all times. The cows should be fed in a paved area outside of the lounging area, and hay should be kept in front of them at all times. If silage is included in the feeding program, it should be fed to them once a day only. The cows should be grained while they are being milked. Unless the requirements are acceptable one should not attempt to employ loose housing for the dairy herd. If the system is accepted along with the practices necessary to make it work, the authors feel that the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages."

You can see there is nothing revolutionary about this system except that it saves a lot of work. You can fill a self-feeder two or three times a week, thus bringing the cattle to the feed instead of bringing feed to the cattle every day. And you milk in the milking parlor, instead of carrying milk from the stalls to the milk house.

There are other advantages too. You can increase your herd without renting a barn. You don't have to clean out the barn every day; cleaning is only done once or twice a year. You get more and better manure for your soil. Costly items such as stanchions, insulation, ventilation, and individual drinking cups are not necessary. The report also found there was less feed, slobber and leg injury.

One of the most important factors is that a stanchion-type barn must be built warmly enough to keep a temperature around 45 to 50 degrees in winter. With a loafing barn, cattle must be allowed to run loose. But there is no evidence to indicate that warm quarters are necessary for high production. In loafing barns cattle get more exercise and have a better appetite for roughage.

You can easily get details on the layout and construction of loose housing barns. Consult the extension services department of your provincial department of agriculture or the engineering department at your nearest agricultural college.

Since pen-type barns are cold housing, construction can be cheaper. In fact, some new barns are being built without a masonry foundation. These are "pole barns," supported on a number of large poles, like telegraph poles, sunk five feet into the ground. Some idea like this may have to be adopted to bring down the cost of new farm buildings.

1953 Dodge, Featuring New Styling, Now On Display Throughout Canada

Featuring completely new styling, (longer, lower, wider-looking), and providing what is claimed to be a new, smoother, steadier ride, the new 1953 Dodge Regent and Crusader models are now on display at Dodge-DeSoto dealers throughout Canada. These new Dodge models have not just been changed or "face-lifted," they're entirely new and different, according to officials of Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Limited.

There's a new, wider frame and new spring suspension that are claimed to result in a more level, road-hugging ride and greatly improved cornering ability.

Bodies are low, wider and more compact, yet there is actually more room inside than in previous models. For instance, the back seat is a full 8 inches wider—there is more head room and leg room, front and back. Long, sweeping renders accentuate the long, low look, the rear fenders blending smoothly into the continental-type rear deck. This wider, lower rear deck permits a much wider rear deck lid and consequently increased usable trunk space.

Glass area is greatly increased with a new one-piece windshield, optically curved for minimum distortion; higher side windows and a wider, wrap-around rear window. With chair-high seats allowing comfortable upright seating, this bigger glass area results in excellent vision for driver and passengers.

Some idea of the "newness" of these new Dodge models can be judged from the manufacturer's claim of 75 new design and engineering features—many of which are major changes. A few of the most important new features are: "K" type rear doors on 4-door sedans for more room entering or leaving; one-piece windshield; reduced overall height; new frame design, wider and lower; new spring position which gives additional resistance to twist; 30% more trunk capacity; belt line lowered 3½ inches allowing deeper windows; the engine has been moved forward for better ride; glove box located in centre of instrument panel; pull-type door handles; narrower "A" posts for better vision; new parking ease as overall length has been reduced. Eight standard body colors are offered, with two metallic colors at extra cost. In addition 16 two-tone combinations are available in production at extra cost.

The following models will be available: In the Dodge Crusader line—a four-door sedan and the Suburban; in the Dodge Regent

Father Jacob Nominated To Parish Assistant

LEGAL—Father Jacob received from His Grace, the Archbishop of Edmonton, the news of his nomination as assistant to the Parish of the Immaculate Conception. Father Jacob came here from St. Boniface in January, 1949. Since his arrival he has proven his great zeal in the activities of the ministry. His competence and generosity in the service of God, in the direction of youth as well as in the direction of the local choir have no more need of proof. The pastor and parishioners will be deeply moved by his departure. A farewell party was organized in his favour last Wednesday evening when a packed hall of parishioners and friends made apparent the great appreciation of his excellent services.

He is wished the best of success and happiness in his field of action.

Appeal For Civil Defence Volunteers

MORINVILLE—Art L. Stapleton, civil defence director, makes the following comments: "Within the last year or two, we have been faced with several natural disasters, including the Fraser and Red River floods and the serious fires in Rimouski and Chabano."

Civil defence is an attempt to organize on local, provincial and national levels against such disasters in the future.

The basic aim of civil defence is to render voluntary service to oneself as well as to the community, in which help is given freely to others and is reciprocated.

The mutual help given by members of the local community to each other is supplemented by the help given from one community to the other and coordinated by the provincial authority. When the emergency is great, mutual help is extended by one province to the other, or by the federal authority to a province.

The volunteering for service in civil defence outside of your daily working hours, you can secure the necessary training in methods of self-help and the advantages of membership in a planned local scheme that is part of a nationwide organization and you will receive guidance, advice and equipment from that organization.

We all pay insurance premiums in cash to protect ourselves against injury or loss by fire or disaster. Civil defence is an investment for the same purpose but it is a payment not in cash but in time and effort.

Support your local civil defence organization by becoming a member. Emergencies are imminent in all our daily lives. If by the training you receive, you are helped over these emergencies, you will have benefited greatly.

If you never need what you learn, you will have lost nothing but if you never learn what you need, you may lose everything."
